Why do we care about making cremation simple?

I've been licensed and serving in cremation and funeral service for 20 years.

In 2005 when my father passed, everything changed for me.

I thought I would be prepared for this (we've helped over 20,000 families with cremation of their loved ones in the past 35 years.) but I found myself lost, scared and confused. Feeling like everything was out of my control.

Contacting relatives, organizing documents, making arrangements... At the time it all felt overwhelming and complicated - even though I knew the procedures like the back of my hand.

When I had finished grieving, I looked back and thought, "There has to be a better way." Arranging a cremation is too complicated for no good reason and control to families when they feel like their world is turning upside down.

We strive to make the cremation process as simple, dignified and transparent as we possibly can and to offer honest help to families when they're most vulnerable.
